

Carl Carlson wrote
at 6:48pm on June 17th, 2009

I've known Sean Wenlock for a number of years. He is a gentle loving man, with two unbelievably loving and caring parents. He is heavily dependent on the stalwart support from his caregiver, Doc, and Denver Options. Sean is doing remarkably well, given his severe disabilities, but all that is about to change. Even though the cost of Sean's care is small compared to alternative forms of care, it is about to be slashed by the freight train of across-the-board budget cuts in the state of Colorado. I'm all for general belt tightening when there is lack of funds, but not at the expense of the helpless and vulnerable. We are defined as a society by how we care for those who cannot take care of themselves. Together, the Friends of Sean can help the Wenlock family speak with clarity and vigor. Together we are Sean's Voice.